With the development of technology in the twenty-first century, it would be really difficult to imagine life without computers. They are a source of information, education, and entertainment, but today's world of computers can also be quite frightening and dangerous. This is because of people who use computers for illegal purposes. They are called "hackers". Hackers spend their time playing with computers data in all parts of cyberspace. Much of what they do is not dangerous, but sometimes their activities break the law; for example, when they break into websites, take control of computers or create viruses. They are especially interested in breaking through the security of military websites. Hackers know how to trick people, just using their programs. They use a "Trojan Horse", a programme that looks perfectly safe, but actually contains something destructive. The only way of not getting into trouble is not to open it. Although they can get serious punishment if they are caught, most hackers still think that what they do is a game. Hollywood normally shows us that side of hackers: fun characters that save the world from all-powerful computer multinationals. They often meet at festivals to take part in discussions, share their experiences meet other hackers and generally have a good time. These meetings are organized in well-known places like Las Vegas or Berlin. However, what the hackers do at such festivals is a secret and often many of their activities take place at night. Recently, hacking has started to increase. Hackers are getting into computer systems and stealing or destroying information. It's certain that there is going to be a lot more of this high-tech crime in the twenty-first century.

We should care about dying languages for the same reason that we care when a species of animal or plant dies. It reduces the diversity of our planet. In the case of language, we are talking about intellectual and cultural diversity, not biological diversity, but the issues are the same. As a result of decades of environmental publicity and activism, most people have come to accept that biodiversity is a good thing. But linguistic diversity has not enjoyed the same publicity. Diversity occupies a central place in evolutionary theory because it enables a species to survive in different environments. Increasing uniformity holds dangers for the long-term survival of a species. The strongest ecosystems are those which are most diverse. It has often been said that our success in colonizing the planet can be accounted for by our ability to develop diverse cultures which suit different environments.

6) It is stressed in the passage that biological diversity _____.

A) has received far more attention than linguistic diversity

B) is richer in northern regions than in southern ones

C) is not in any way related to ecosystems

D) contributes very little to the survival of plant and animal species

E) is fast being reduced

7) The point is made in the passage that the survival of species indifferent environments _____.

A) has been made possible by diversity

B) has been made possible by the continuous efforts of man

C) bears no relation to the survival of languages and cultures

D) is of no real importance except to biologists

E) has aroused very little interest in the general public

8) The author draws a strong parallel between _____.

A) linguistic and biological diversity

B) the uniformity of ecosystems and that of cultures

C) environmental and cultural publicity

D) plant and animal species

E) cultural and linguistic diversity

9) It is pointed out in the passage that man _____.

- A) has developed diverse cultures which are appropriate for the environment he lives in
- B) has always been very much aware of the benefits of biodiversity
- C) has always valued cultural diversity well above biodiversity
- D) has always felt that cultural uniformity is desirable
- E) has always found it very hard to adapt himself to any new environment

10) According to the writer, diversity on earth _____.

- A) consists not only of the diversity of species and plants but also of languages and cultures
- B) has encouraged man to exploit his environment
- C) is rapidly becoming reduced owing to a lack of public interest in it
- D) can best be maintained through the preservation of different languages
- E) has only recently become a research concern among environmentalists

According to the World Health Organization over a billion adults around the world suffer from high blood pressure. It is now taking steps to fight against what is called a silent killer. High blood pressure can lead to strokes and a heart attack. Almost 10 million people die of these two diseases every year. They are the number one causes of death globally. High blood pressure also leads to kidney failure, blindness and other illnesses. It often goes hand in hand with diabetes and obesity, which increases heart risks even further. As the WHO reports, people in developing countries in Africa suffer more from high blood pressure than people in developed countries. The reason is that health care in the developed world is much better organized and people go to the doctor soon enough. High blood pressure should never be ignored and always taken seriously. It is a warning sign from your body that something is not OK. Although people may live with high blood pressure for years without even knowing it, it is important to check your blood pressure regularly and take the necessary steps. The WHO says that you can reduce your blood pressure by changing your living habits. According to the World Health Organization over a billion adults around the world suffer from high blood pressure. It is now taking steps to fight against what is called a silent killer. High blood pressure can lead to strokes and a heart attack. Almost 10 million people die of these two diseases every year. They are the number one causes of death globally. High blood pressure also leads to kidney failure, blindness and other illnesses. It often goes hand in hand with diabetes and obesity, which increases heart risks even further. As the WHO reports, people in developing countries in Africa suffer more from high blood pressure than people in developed countries. The reason is that health care in the developed world is much better organized and people go to the doctor soon enough. High blood pressure should never be ignored and always taken seriously. It is a warning sign from your body that something is not OK. Although people may live with high blood pressure for years without even knowing it, it is important to check your blood pressure regularly and take the necessary steps. The WHO says that you can reduce your blood pressure by changing your living habits. Eating a balanced diet, exercising regularly, avoiding alcohol and nicotine are some things that you can do without consulting a doctor.
